Nexsen Pruet's robust international practice has launched a new website page, Cross Borders Practice at Nexsen Pruet: Doing Business with Japan, also reachable at japan.nexsenpruet.com. A resources hub available in both Japanese and English, the page offers a wealth of information for Japanese businesses looking to establish or expand their presence in the Carolinas.

“Japan is a significant economic partner in both North and South Carolina,” says David Robinson, Nexsen Pruet’s Japan Practice Co-Chair. “We wanted to offer Japanese businesses detailed resources and tips to help them set up or broaden their reach in this region.”

“Our firm has a rich history of working with Japanese companies, and we are thrilled to provide a new platform to assist them with their business needs,” says David Garrett, Nexsen Pruet’s Japan Practice Co-Chair.

The page offers expansive information regarding business processes specific to Japanese companies, including business structures, financing, immigration, investment incentives, site selection, and on-going operations. In addition, the website highlights community resources such as local and state economic development associations, non-profits, international centers, and more.
